The Masters of the Revels and Elizabeth I's Court Theatre W. R. Streitberger, 2016-02-26 The Masters of the Revels and Elizabeth I's Court Theatre places the Revels Office and Elizabeth I's court theatre in a pre modern patronage and gift exchange driven world of centralized power in which hospitality liberality and conspicuous display were fundamental aspects of social life W R Streitberger reconsiders the relationship between the biographies of the Masters and the conduct of their duties rethinking the organization and development of the Office re examining its productions and exploring its impact on the development of the commercial theatre The nascent capitalist economy that developed alongside and interpenetrated the gift driven system that was in place during Elizabeth's reign became the vehicle through which the Revels Office along with the commercial theatre was transformed Beginning in the early 1570s and stretching over a period of twenty years this change was brought about by a small group of influential Privy Councillors When this project began in the early 1570s the Queen's revels were principally in house productions devised by the Master of the Revels and funded by the Crown When the project was completed in the late 1590s the Revels Office had been made responsible for plays only and put on a budget so small that it was incapable of producing them That job was left to the companies performing at court Between 1594 and 1600 the revels consisted almost entirely of plays brought in by professional companies in the commercial theatres in London These companies were patronized by the queen's relatives and friends and their theatres were protected by the Privy Council Between 1594 and 1600 for example all the plays in the revels were supplied by the Admiral's and Chamberlain's Players which included writers such as Shakespeare and legendary actors such as Edward Alleyn Richard Burbage and Will Kempe The queen's revels essentially became a commercial enterprise paid for by the ordinary Londoners who came to see these companies perform in selected London theatres which were protected by the Council

Elizabeth I's Final Years Robert Stedall, 2022-06-30 A study of the later years of the English monarch as seen through the men she surrounded herself with in her court Elizabeth I's Final Years outlines the interwoven relationships and rivalries between politicians and courtiers surrounding England's omnipotent queen in the years following the Earl of Leicester's death in 1588 Elizabeth now surrounded herself with magnetically attractive younger men with the courtly graces to provide her with what Alison Weir has called an eroticised political relationship With these favourites holding sway at court they saw personal bravery in the tiltyard or on military exploits as their means to political authority They failed to appreciate that the parsimonious queen would always resist military aggression and resolutely backed her meticulously cautious advisors William Cecil Lord Burghley and later his son Robert With its access to New World treasure it was Spain who threatened the fragile balance of power in Continental Europe With English military intervention becoming inevitable the Cecils diverted the likes of Walter Raleigh and the Earl of Essex despite their lack of military experience away from the limelight at court into colonial and military expeditions leaving them just short of the resources needed for success The favourites' promotions caused friction when seasoned soldiers like Sir Francis Vere with his unparalleled military record in the Low Countries were left in subordinate roles When Spanish support for rebellion in Ireland threatened English security Robert Cecil encouraged Elizabeth to send Essex knowing that high command was beyond his capabilities Essex retorted by rebelling against Cecil's government for which he lost his head Both Elizabeth and Cecil realised that only the bookish Lord Mountjoy another favourite had the military acumen to resolve the Irish crisis but his mistress Essex's sister the incomparable Penelope Rich was mired by involvement in her brother's conspiracy Despite this Cecil gave Mountjoy unstinting support biding his time to tarnish his name with James I as he did against Raleigh and his other political foes Praise for Elizabeth I's Final Years Her Favourites Her Fighting Men Meticulously researched history told with academic flair wit and enthusiasm Professor Steven Veerapen University of Strathclyde Robert Steadall's superb book is both educational and entertaining Books Monthly A masterpiece of original scholarship Midwest Book Review
