

PSYCHIATRY FLASHCARDS QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS 2022/2023 LATEST UPDATE

What are the 5 stages of loss as described by Elizabeth Kübler-Ross ("DABDA") -
ANS-The 5 stages, popularly known by the acronym DABDA, include:

"Denial" — The first reaction is denial. In this stage individuals believe the diagnosis is somehow mistaken, and cling to a false, preferable reality.

"Anger" — When the individual recognizes that denial cannot continue, it becomes frustrated, especially at proximate individuals. Certain psychological responses of a person undergoing this phase would be: "Why me? It's not fair!"; "How can this happen to me?"; "Who is to blame?"; "Why would this happen?".

"Bargaining" — The third stage involves the hope that the individual can avoid a cause of grief. Usually, the negotiation for an extended life is made in exchange for a reformed lifestyle. People facing less serious trauma can bargain or seek compromise.

"Depression" — "I'm so sad, why bother with anything?"; "I'm going to die soon, so what's the point?"; "I miss my loved one, why go on?" During the fourth stage, the individual becomes saddened by the mathematical probability of death. In this state, the individual may become silent, refuse visitors and spend much of the time mournful and sullen.

"Acceptance" — "It's going to be okay."; "I can't fight it, I may as well prepare for it."; "Nothing is impossible, just do it." In this last stage, individuals embrace mortality or inevitable future, or that of a loved one, or other tragic event. People dying may precede the survivors in this state, which typically comes with a calm, retrospective view for the individual, and a stable condition of emotions.
