Prime Suspect Lynda La Plante, 1994 The drag queen named Vera Reynolds swayed on stage singing Falling in Love Again And a sixteen year old boy lay in Vera s fire engulfed apartment very very dead He was a rent boy a sex for hire street kid who catered to the tastes of special customers It was the kind of murder Soho s Vice Squad saw often But the influential do gooder who was a prime suspect in this one made the young boy s death different a ticking bomb able to blast open the nasty secret lives of politicians judges and cops Detective Jane Tennison had moved up the career ladder through sheer guts and an unstoppable passion for justice Now on her first day as the head of the Vice Squad she caught a case threatening to wreck her career She had been told whom to arrest and whom to back off from in the murder of the rent boy And she couldn t go with the program She knew a destroyer of children was out there She knew she had a choice to save her future or go after him like an avenging angel and damn the consequences to hell

Female Corpses in Crime Fiction Glen S. Close, 2018-10-10 This book examines the central significance of sexualized female corpses in modern and contemporary Hispanic and Anglophone crime fiction Beginning with the foundational detective fictions of the nineteenth century it draws from diverse subgenres to describe a transatlantic tradition of necropornography characterized by lascivious interest in female cadavers dissection morgues femicide and snuff movies Hard boiled and police procedural classics from the U S and the U K are juxtaposed with texts by established Spanish and Spanish American genre masters and with obscure works that prefigure the contemporary transmedial boom in corpse centered fictions The rhetoric and aesthetics of necropornographic crime fiction are related to those of popular crime journalism and forensic science television dramas This study argues that crime fiction has long fixated disproportionately on the corpses of beautiful young white women and continues to treat their deaths and autopsies as occasions for male visual pleasure male subjective self
