Abstract The present paper discussed on emotional maturity and self concept at higher secondary students. The study attempts to analyze the various aspects of emotional maturity and self concept among higher secondary students. The end of the twentieth century and beginning of the twenty first century have seen on unprecedented upsurge in activities revolving around the teenage adolescence students. It is the dire need of the hour that as teenage adolescence students we should have proper emotional development to rightly use our human emotions. So our human mind has something vital to do with human emotions and we should give a self concept to control our emotions with the mind! But our emotions need to be understood, taught, trained and controlled by the mind! Emotional maturity moves beyond "intelligence" to a higher state of consciousness, guided by what one senses, feels and intuits, and one's heart. Emotional maturity and self concept is a tool for promoting students mental health and personality.

1. Introduction

The main purpose of education is the progress of physical, social activity, emotion, and wisdom of student sustainability. The adequate education makes good quality human resources for a rapidly developing country. According to this reason, many countries have been trying to develop the educational quality in the national policy and strategy to enhance effective implementation. The student's academic achievement problem is not only occurring in India but it also in many countries around the world. Some countries have been trying to solve this problem by educational staff development, teaching processes, and parent and community cooperation and some country have been looking backward to student inner character by depicting causal relationship influencing to academic achievement. The result of studies revealed some important factor strongly related with academic achievement is "self-concept and Emotional Maturity". Emotional Maturity is a process in which the personality is continuously striving for greater sense of emotional health both intra psychically and intra personally. [1] "An Emotional mature person is one who is able to keep a lid on feelings [6]. He can suffer in silence. He can bide his time in spite of present discomfort. He is not subject to swing in mood, he is not volatile. When he does express emotion, he does so with moderation, decently and in good order". Emotional maturity is the ability to bear tension and it is the ability to develop high tolerance for disagree circumstance [4]. Self concept is love and happy with whom you are now. It is an agreement with oneself to appreciate validates, accept and support who you are at every moment. Self concept is the degree to which and individual having considered his personal characteristics is able and willing to live with them. Self-conceptions people recognize their assets and are free to draw upon them, even if they are not all that could be desired [2]. Self-concept does not need outward approval. It is sufficient in and of itself. The individual will accept other's approval with gratitude, but intuitively knows when he or she has done well. Self-concepts are qualities present in one self. One assesses these qualities through estimates rather than by measurement. Those qualities may concern what one does (e.g. having a disposition for compassion and consideration) and/or may concern non-measurable aspects of how one appears (e.g. pretty, handsome). The assessments placed on these qualities may be significantly influenced by outsiders in one's immediate environment and/or by society at large.

2. Need and Significance of the Study

The specific needs for identifying these phenomena of Emotional maturity and self concept as a natural and inevitable essential outcome of student growth and
