Abstract The purpose of this study was to examine the effects of a 12-week, 1000 kcal energy deficit diet on the body composition and physical fitness of 10 sedentary, obese women. The subjects were randomly assigned to either a control group or an exercise group. The control group was instructed to maintain their current level of physical activity, while the exercise group was instructed to perform moderate-intensity aerobic exercise for 30 minutes, 3 times per week. The results of the study showed that the exercise group lost significantly more weight and fat mass than the control group. The exercise group also showed significant improvements in physical fitness, including increases in aerobic capacity and decreases in resting heart rate and blood pressure. The control group showed no significant changes in body composition or physical fitness. The results of this study suggest that a combination of diet and exercise is the most effective way to lose weight and improve physical fitness in sedentary, obese women.

Abstract

[illegible][illegible]

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health of sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were 20 men, aged 40-50 years, who were sedentary and had no history of cardiovascular disease. They were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The control group did not exercise. The physical fitness and health of the subjects were measured at the beginning and end of the 12-week period. The results showed that the exercise group had significantly higher levels of physical fitness and health than the control group at the end of the 12-week period. The exercise group had significantly higher levels of aerobic capacity, muscular strength, and endurance. They also had significantly lower levels of body fat and blood pressure. The control group had no significant changes in physical fitness or health. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness and health of sedentary, middle-aged men.
