The Secret of the Island Jules Verne,2020-09-28 It was now two years and a half since the castaways from the balloon had been thrown on Lincoln Island and during that period there had been no communication between them and their fellow creatures Once the reporter had attempted to communicate with the inhabited world by confiding to a bird a letter which contained the secret of their situation but that was a chance on which it was impossible to reckon seriously Ayrton alone under the circumstances which have been related had come to join the little colony Now suddenly on this day the 17th of October other men had unexpectedly appeared in sight of the island on that deserted sea There could be no doubt about it A vessel was there But would she pass on or would she put into port In a few hours the colonists would definitely know what to expect Cyrus Harding and Herbert having immediately called Gideon Spilett Pencroft and Neb into the dining room of Granite House told them what had happened Pencroft seizing the telescope rapidly swept the horizon and stopping on the indicated point that is to say on that which had made the almost imperceptible spot on the photographic negative And for a considerable time the settlers remained silent given up to all the thoughts all the emotions all the fears all the hopes which were aroused by this incident the most important which had occurred since their arrival in Lincoln Island Certainly the colonists were not in the situation of castaways abandoned on a sterile islet constantly contending against a cruel nature for their miserable existence and incessantly tormented by the longing to return to inhabited countries Pencroft and Neb especially who felt themselves at once so happy and so rich would not have left their island without regret They were accustomed besides to this new life in the midst of the domain which their intelligence had as it were civilised But at any rate this ship brought news from the world perhaps even from their native land It was bringing fellow creatures to them and it may be conceived how deeply their hearts were moved at the sight From time to time Pencroft took the glass and rested himself at the window From thence he very attentively examined the vessel which was at a distance of twenty miles to the east The colonists had as yet therefore no means of signalling their presence A flag would not have been perceived a gun would not have been heard a fire would not have been visible However it was certain that the island overtopped by Mount Franklin could not have escaped the notice of the vessel s look out But why was this ship coming there Was it simple chance

which brought it to that part of the Pacific where the maps mentioned no land except Tabor Islet which itself was out of the route usually followed by vessels from the Polynesian Archipelagos from New Zealand and from the American coast To this question which each one asked himself a reply was suddenly made by Herbert
