1) Product Information – Basic information for each product listed in the guide includes a description, pack & size, price, purchase unit of measure, counting unit of measure and supplier. 2) Par level – This guide includes separate par levels for weekday and weekend orders. 3) Counts – Every product listed should be counted at least once per week. The most effective time to count is either at the end of the day or before you open. Monday counts can be used for calculating weekly inventory values. 4) Order history – Order amounts are entered for each product, creating an order history for each item. Glancing at a glance, how much product is being used from week to week, helps in establishing more accurate par levels, thereby reducing the risk of running out of product.
