Microvascular Reconstruction Anatomy Applications And Surgical Technique:

Microvascular Reconstruction Ralph T. Manktelow, 2012-12-06 Reconstructive microvascular surgery is now in its teens At first many thought this new child was a whim and would fail to thrive Some were uncertain others with vision either supported or became actively involved in this new area of surgical endeavour Although initial interest was focused on the replantation of amputated parts it has been the one stage free transfer of living tissue to a distant site which has launched microsurgery into the surgical spotlight From its humble beginnings we have witnessed a revolution in this branch of plastic surgery many of the long established methods of reconstruction have like barricades fallen before the advances made in this field In its infancy there were relatively few procedures available There was a tendency to make the patient's problem fit the operation rather than the reverse and this frequently led to an inferior result The then known flaps such as the groin flap and the deltopectoral flap were employed Unfortunately they were sites which posed many technical problems namely those of vascular anomaly a short pedicle and vessels of small calibre Long operations were the norm and vascular thrombosis was not uncommon Hospital routine often was disrupted and there was a danger that these new techniques would fall into disrepute Over the last decade this state of affairs has changed dramatically

Urken, Mack L. Cheney, Keith E. Blackwell, Jeffrey R. Harris, Tessa A. Hadlock, Neal Futran, 2012-01-05 This Atlas depicts in a clear manner the use of regional skin muscle and musculocutaneous flaps as well as donor sites from distant regions of the body where vascularized skin muscle bone and nerves can be harvested and transferred to the head and neck Otolaryngologists plastic surgeons and general surgeons use both regional and free flaps to reconstruct damage to the head and neck caused by cancer and trauma This Atlas provides the surgeon with techniques for mastering different donor sites needed to find solutions to virtually every reconstruction problem It provides detailed descriptions of the anatomy and harvesting techniques of the major regional and free flap donor sites currently employed in head and neck reconstruction Major Limb Replantation and Postischemia Syndrome Hans-Ulrich Steinau, 2013-03-14 Posttraumatic stump formation and replantation of the severed limb are both reconstructive plastic operations which may lead to the improvement or destruction of a patient s lifestyle For the primary attending surgeon the decision whether to undertake such an operation depends on the patient's clinical condition, the operational circumstances, the psychological and social aspects, and last but not least on the surgeon's own abilities. This monograph is designed as a synopsis of the great number of pathophysiological parameters and surgical and rehabilitational aspects which must be considered in the analysis of complications in major limb replantation. In addition, basic information about the key role of ischemic myopathy and microangiopathy is supplied to encourage further experimental investigations.
