Mobile Technology In Policing Mobile Technology In Policing:

Mobile technology in policing Great Britain: National Audit Office, 2012-01-27 As the benefits of a programme to equip frontline police officers with mobile devices do not extend beyond a basic level for most forces then value for money has not yet been achieved from the 80 million of expenditure While in many forces mobile devices enable officers to spend more time out of their stations cash savings have been limited and only one in five forces have used the devices effectively to improve their business and operational processes The business case for the Mobile Information Programme funded by the Home Office and managed by the National Policing Improvement Agency under the direction of a programme board focused upon the swift delivery of mobile devices and by December 2010 around 41 000 had been rolled out considerably ahead of schedule Although in reality the Agency cannot mandate forces and has little control over each force's investment decision not enough consideration was given to how forces would use the mobile technology how much local spending was required or how realistic were the announced deadlines While the Programme did not explicitly set out to deliver cashable savings these should have followed from objectives to reduce bureaucracy increase efficiency and contribute to better policing Of the 32 forces responding to an NAO survey only ten claimed some form of cashable savings and these are relatively minor However some forces are predicting greater savings in the future for example by reducing control room costs 22 forces responding to the survey cited drawbacks Technology-led Policing Evelien De Pauw, Paul Ponsaers, Kees van der Vijver, Willy

Bruggeman, Piet Deelman, 2011 Technology has always played an important role in the performance of police tasks In recent years that role has not only expanded but has also been renewed On one hand technology plays a role in supporting policing closed circuit television scanning equipment technical methods of detection etc On the other hand new technology offers opportunities to commit crime particularly in the sphere of information technology which requires constant adjustments of the police in their investigation methods The use of technology raises many interesting questions There are important privacy issues There are also consequences of investing in technology Additionally are police investigations keeping sufficiently up to date with technological developments including advances in computer technology as well as strong developments in the sphere of natural science This book originally a volume of the Journal of Police Studies examines the concerns and necessity for technology in poli Insights into Police Technology Pasquale De Marco, 2025-04-19 In the ever evolving landscape

Policing in Smart Societies Antoinette Verhage, Marleen Easton, Sofie De Kimpe, 2022-01-23 Smart societies pose new challenges for police organizations Demands for more efficiency and effectiveness test police organizations which are often resistant to change This book uses the concept of the abstract police to describe the way in which police organizations have tried to adapt to these new evolutions and the consequences The chapters stem from a conference called Street Policing in a Smart Society which sought to frame and analyse these developments in policing In this book the concept of the abstract police is introduced analysed and then challenged from different angles looking at the evolutions related to technology plural policing police discretion and police decision making As such the book is a reflection of current debates on policing and police organization aiming to give input to the debate by providing new insights on police and police work

The Technology of Policing Peter K. Manning, 2011 With the rise of surveillance technology in the last decade police departments now have an array of sophisticated tools for tracking monitoring even predicting crime patterns In particular crime mapping a technique used by the police to monitor crime by the neighborhoods in their geographic regions has become a regular and relied upon feature of policing Many claim that these technological developments played a role in the crime drop of the 1990s and yet no study of these techniques and their relationship to everyday police work has been made available Noted scholar Peter K Manning spent six years observing three American police departments and two British constabularies in order to determine what effects these kinds of analytic tools have had on modern police management and practices While modern technology allows the police to combat crime in sophisticated detail oriented ways Manning discovers that police strategies and tactics have not been altogether transformed as perhaps would be expected In The Technology of Policing Manning untangles the varying kinds of complex crime control rhetoric that underlie much of today's police department discussion and management and provides valuable insight into which are the most effective and which may be harmful in successfully tracking criminal behavior The Technology of Policing offers a new understanding of the changing world of police departments and information technology s significant and undeniable influence on crime management

Information Technology and the Criminal Justice System April Pattavina,2005 How has information technology changed the way we monitor criminal behavior How has it changed the way we examine patterns of criminal behavior How have criminal justice organizations adapted to using information technology What is the future of information in criminal justice There have been many technical analytical legal and organizational issues related to advances in computer and information technology over the past several decades Given the substantial investments that federal state and local criminal justice agencies are making in information technology they now consider it an integral component of understanding how our criminal justice system works Information Technology and the Criminal Justice System suggests that information technology in criminal justice will continue to challenge us to think about how we turn information into knowledge who can use that knowledge and for what purposes In this text editor April Pattavina synthesizes the growing body of research in information technology and criminal justice Contributors examine what has been learned from past experiences what the current state of IT is in various components of the criminal justice system and what challenges lie ahead Key Features Covers a broad array of topics including IT development and applications in organizations data quality issues legal issues and criminal justice education Spans a variety of criminal justice agencies including courts police and corrections Includes contributors renowned in the field of criminal justice information systems Incorporates case studies to enhance students understanding of real life situations Information Technology and the Criminal Justice System is recommended for upper level undergraduate and graduate level courses in Criminal Justice departments including Information Technology and Criminal Justice Criminal Justice Data Analysis Crime Analysis Technology and Criminal Justice and Technology and Society This book is also an excellent resource for professionals in the field

Policing and Technology Barrie Sheldon,Paul Wright,2010-06-14 The rapid development of modern technologies is having profound implications on modern day policing Recent innovations include the proliferation of sophisticated communication and surveillance devices developments in road traffic and crime investigation techniques personal safety equipment the internet and network and computer forensics all of which are accompanied by often complex new legislative and regulative requirements This book ensures that policing students are fully informed and completely up to date with changes and understand the implications and impact that changing technology brings to practice Each chapter includes clear objectives links to the NOS practical and reflective tasks case studies and summaries
