is made at approximately the same time (around 10:00 a.m.) every day by the respondent at a residential office environment (home).

Results: patients' understanding about stress is: Stress is a negative emotion that arises from a threat to one's feelings, accompanied with the physical effects of increased blood pressure, increased pulse rate, increased breathing rate and increased sweating. Stressful situations are not good, but all the stressors including work, family, school, the pressure of the study, and living with the situation cause stress. Stress is not a disease, it is a response that the body has to deal with and it is not a bad thing.

Information and Management: Managing across continents and cultures with innovative technology for better work. People, process, systems, strategy, project, global, performance, business and property, growth and innovation. The workplace is changing.

Setting performance incentives with carbon programs substantially have positive savings potential, and a strong effect on greenhouse gas emissions.
