Müller, 2005-01-25 The explosive growth of application areas such as electronic commerce enterprise resource planning and mobile computing has profoundly and irreversibly changed our views on software systems Nowadays software is to be based on open architectures that continuously change and evolve to accommodate new components and meet new requirements Software must also operate on different platforms without recompilation and with minimal assumptions about its operating environment and its users Furthermore software must be robust and autonomous capable of serving a naive user with a minimum of overhead and interference Agent concepts hold great promise for responding to the new realities of software systems They offer higher level abstractions and mechanisms which address issues such as knowledge representation and reasoning communication coordination cooperation among heterogeneous and autonomous parties perception commitments goals beliefs and intentions all of which need conceptual modelling On the one hand the concrete implementation of these concepts can lead to advanced functionalities e.g. in inference based query answering transaction control adaptive workflows brokering and integration of disparate information sources and automated communication processes On the other hand their rich representational capabilities allow more faithful and flexible treatments of complex organizational processes leading to more effective requirements analysis and architectural detailed design
