

The Founding Fathers and Political Parties

Task: Watch this video about how the Two Party System in the USA developed
Why do we have a 2-party system in the United States? - YouTube

The US Constitution makes no mention of political parties. The Founding Fathers – or “factions” as they referred to them causing divisions in the country

George Washington on political parties:
“The alternate domination of one faction over another, shadowed by the prospect of revenge, natural to party dissension, which in different countries has perpetrated the most horrid enormities, is itself a frightful sight.”

John Adams worried that “a division of the republic into two great parties is to be dreaded as the great political evil.” And that’s exactly what has come to pass.

Alexander Hamilton on political parties:
“the most fatal disease” of popular governments.
