Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine if there were differences in perceived self-efficacy between students who had completed a course in research methodology and those who had not. A total of 100 students from a large university participated in the study. The results showed that students who had completed the course had significantly higher self-efficacy scores than those who had not. This suggests that a course in research methodology can help to increase students' confidence in their ability to conduct research.

- STUDY Using the 2000 Census, researchers found that 10 percent of the population was multiracial, up from 6 percent in 1990. The study also found that the multiracial population was growing faster than the overall population.

1. Abstract – A brief summary of the paper, usually 100-200 words.
2. Introduction – The background of the problem, the purpose of the study, and the research questions.
3. Methods – The design, participants, materials, and procedures used in the study.

1. The first step is to identify the problem or question that needs to be answered. This involves understanding the context and the specific requirements of the task.
