The Television Revolution Maarten Dings, 2007

Thinking Outside the Box Gary R. Edgerton, Brian Geoffrey Rose, 2005-01-01 Thinking Outside the Box brings together some of the best and most challenging scholarship about TV genres exploring their genesis their functions and development and the interaction of disparate genres The authors argue that genre is a process rather than a static category and that it signifies much about the people who produce and watch the shows In addition to considering traditional genres such as sitcoms soap operas and talk shows the contributors explore new hybrids including reality programs teen oriented science fiction and quality dramas and examine how many of these shows have taken on a global reach Identifying historical continuities and envisioning possible trends this is the richest and most current study of how television genres form operate and change The Box Jeff Kisseloff,1997-01-01 Fascinating behind the scenes details and a solid outline of television s technological economic and public policy context ALA Booklist Open the Box Jane Root,1986 Television viewers are often labelled as addicts or zombies who avidly lap up a daily diet of soap operas and quiz shows This heavily illustrated book breaks down these stereotypes This title available in eBook format Click here for more information Visit our eBookstore at www.ebookstore.tandf.co.uk Practical Television E. Hutchinson,2015-08-04 Excerpt from Here Is Television Your Window to the World The author of this book has helped to shape the beginnings of television the newest of the instruments available to those in the future who seek to inform the minds of men or to win their sympathy and understanding It takes imagination and daring to leave the security of a known medium to explore through trial and error with tools which are often anachronisms as soon as used a new medium which has a limited audience no traditions no certainties of technique It was in part this same imagination which led the author to teach what was perhaps the first University class in Television Programming Offered by the Washington Square Writing Center of New York University in the fall of 1940 this course has been conducted each semester since that time with the exception of a brief period during the war and this volume is an expansion of these lectures discussions and demonstrations It is of special interest that this book grows out of teaching and will be widely purchased and used as a textbook With television admittedly in its infancy as an industry and as an art form why it may be asked should we presume to teach the techniques of television programming The answer is that we have a tradition of demanding that our best doctors artists and scientists shall teach us who seek to follow in their steps Happily most creative people are genuinely interested in helping us to share whatever secrets of technique or knowledge they possess Moreover the wisest of them realize that teaching benefits both him who learns and him who teaches The task of communicating what one knows or has done is in itself clarifying We do not have knowledge in its fullest realization until we have attempted to express it to communicate it to others Thus it is fortunate that when we as students seek to benefit from what pioneers in any field have learned knowledge itself is perfected in the very process of teaching About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works Electronic Television George H.
