Not Brave Enough My Leap Into The Stratosphere:

Not Brave Enough Rick Butcher, 2013-10-09 It was a moment of revelation for me I was seventeen when I learned to fly just a stupid kid and if I knew then what I know now I wouldn't have done it I didn't necessarily regret it in fact quite the opposite I love to fly I love everything about it I just suddenly realized that I'm not inherently brave enough of a person to have put myself through all that I've endured while chasing the clouds I was a kid so squarely risk averse that I demanded everyone get their money back after playing cards for pennies and nickels I was a kid who was intimidated by the challenges involved with earning Boy Scout badges or the honor roll If I had been offered a safe effortless and boring destiny to never have to face the unknown I would've taken it and probably never looked back

Portraits Unpainted G. Bernstein, 2005-05-16 As a young man Parker was a gifted artist apple of his family's eye and a sought after lover Yet on the verge of success he walked away from it all Twenty two years later now a respected physician but a loner he learns he has inoperable cancer and will die within months With the death sentence Parker's questions about his own life demand immediate answers and resolution Why did he give up art Why is he so alone And so like a surgeon doing an autopsy he cuts open his past and examines its parts and in so doing presents the reader with a vital and varied cast of characters From his youth we meet his wild friends and fellow art students the woman he loves and the other women he sleeps with the demanding mother and beleaguered father whose suffocating hopes for him he must flee and his brilliant but scathing art teacher who risks everything for success And then
