MMS Daniel Ralph, Paul Graham, 2004-04-21 MMS has evolved from the huge popularity of the SMS text service for GSM networks. It is a departure from the transport mechanism used for SMS which is based on the GSM signalling channels to the use of IP to transport messages within the MMS network. To this end MMS has similarities with Internet email and standard IETF protocols. As with any new technology it is difficult to accurately predict the position within the next 5 years although based on previous experience with WAP and SMS it would be fair to say that these protocols will increase in usage over the next 5 years and become legacy for a further 5 years following which users will migrate onto the next wave of messaging. Significant revenue growth and data usage is expected to be driven by consumer usage of MMS. But MMS technology offers more than just a broadening of message content. With MMS it is not only possible to send your multimedia messages from one phone to another but also from phone to email and vice versa. This feature dramatically increases the possibilities of mobile communication both for private and corporate use. Multimedia messaging will reshape the landscape of mobile communication making it more personal, more versatile and more expressive than ever before. MMS is the first book to address how MMS and the use of IP to transport messages will affect existing infrastructure and business models. Covers the fundamental changes to mail and billing systems. Includes future recommendations such as interoperability and evolution. Presents an overview of the MMS technology components. Drawing on the authors' hands-on experience in the implementation of MMS technology, developing billing and delivering services at BT, this innovative book will appeal to engineering managers, network operators, market analysts, business decision makers, content providers and operator organizations.

People and Computers XIV — Usability or Else! Sharon McDonald, Yvonne Waern, Gilbert Cockton, 2012-12-06 Currently we are at the beginnings of widespread wireless connectivity and ubiquitous computing. The Web is merging with a variety of technologies: cell phones, laptop computers, hand-held organisers, information appliances and GPS and other sensors. The capability for access anytime and anywhere is here. The increasing frequency of cell phone calls at inappropriate times testifies that people no longer can easily control access. Devices can determine where they are located and can make a range of information available to users as well as make users available to others or their devices. We have proposed a general technique that promises to assist in mediating access. It capitalises on advantages afforded by computation.

Hollan, Stometta, 1992 We first described the negotiation technique in the context of problems involved in scheduling meetings and then showed that similar issues which at first may seem unrelated but in fact have much in common.

arise in other contexts One such activity gaining immediate access is currently of growing importance because of expanding connectivity via wireless technology Cell phones and related technologies make it possible to be constantly available for synchronous interaction At times this can be advantageous but the associated costs and benefits result in a complex tradeoff space for designers as well as users
