Gram, Philip G. Zimbardo, 1997 Psychology Third Edition builds upon the experience and reputations of Phil Zimbardo and

Ann Weber with the addition of a new co author Bob Johnson who has a wealth of teaching experience at the community college level This briefer less expensive book presents psychology in a meaningful manageable format that focuses on the key questions and core concepts of psychology Introductory psychology covers such a wide range of topics and issues that it becomes difficult for readers to see the forest for the trees To make key psychological concepts more meaningful the authors found inspiration in a classic chess study This study showed that experts did no better than novices at remembering the location of pieces on a chess board when they were placed randomly Only when the patterns represented actual game situations did they make sense and therefore become more easily memorable for the experts Clearly meaningful patterns are easier to remember and understand than random arrangements and Psychology applies this by presenting the field of psychology in meaningful patterns to enhance comprehension These concepts are then applied to readers own lives study skills and the world around them Finally Psychology integrates a cross cultural and multicultural perspective to make psychology meaningful for everyone For anyone interested in Introductory Psychology Psychology Philip G.

The Handbook of Impression Formation Emily Balci, Gordon B. Moskowitz, 2022-08-12. Presenting diverse perspectives from eminent scholars and contemporary researchers, The Handbook of Impression Formation contextualizes current and future areas of research in the social psychology of impression formation within a rich historic framework. Affirming that impression formation is at the core of human experience, chapters explore how and why people form snap judgments about others and when those impressions update. They examine the processes through which people infer the reasons for the events they encounter, allowing people to plan for appropriate behavioral responses to social contexts. The research reviewed is informed by the foundational theory of unconscious automatic processes involved in making judgements of other people, pioneered by Professor Jim Uleman, who contributes a chapter that suggests important new directions and concludes the volume by reflecting on the state of the field more broadly. The book explores how certain attributes stimulate categorization, examining current issues around implicit bias, stereotypes, and social media. Chapters cover a range of approaches, featuring personal narratives, presentation of new data and discoveries, comprehensive literature reviews, and contemplations on where the field must go and what questions require focus for progress to be made, calling for even the most advanced scholars to contribute more to the collective investigation of impression formation. This fascinating work provides a solid foundation from which all researchers can build a new and unique program of research and arms the reader with the intellectual tools they need to chart new theoretical territory and discover aspects of the human experience we have yet to even wonder about. It is essential reading for students and academics in social psychology and the social sciences more broadly.
