Living Well Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi, 1997. A profound exploration by a leading American psychologist of what it means to have a good life of living well and well-being using the theory that human beings are at their most creative, most rewarded, and happiest when they are performing in a state of flow when details are subordinated to the purpose. The result is an unusual combination of serious psychology and self-help: a book that answers the questions self-help books ask but in a way that reflects the cutting edge of psychological research and thinking.

Psychology and the Conduct of Everyday Life Ernst Schraube, Charlotte Højholt, 2015-08-11. Psychology and the Conduct of Everyday Life moves psychological theory and research practice out of the laboratory and into the everyday world. Drawing on recent developments across the social and human sciences, it examines how people live as active subjects within the contexts of their everyday lives, using this as an analytical basis for understanding the dilemmas and contradictions people face in contemporary society. Early chapters gather the latest empirical research to explore the significance of context as a cross-disciplinary critical tool; they include a study of homeless Moroccan men reaffirming their cultural identity via gardening and a look at how the dilemmas faced by children in difficult situations can provide insights into social conflict at school. Later chapters examine the interplay between everyday life around the world and contemporary global phenomena such as the rise of the debt economy, the hegemony of the labor market, and the increased reliance on digital technology in educational settings. The book concludes with a consideration of how social psychology can deepen our understanding of how we conduct our lives and offer possibilities for collective work on the resolution of social conflict.

The Neuropsychology of Everyday Life: Issues in Development and Rehabilitation David E. Tupper, Keith D. Cicerone, 2012-12-06. For a period of some fifteen years following completion of my internship training in clinical psychology (1950-1951) at the Washington University School of Medicine and my concurrent successful navigation through that school's neuroanatomy course, clinical work in neuropsychology for me and the psychologists of my generation consisted almost exclusively of our trying to help our physician colleagues differentiate patients with neurologic disorders from those with psychiatric disorders. In time, experience led all of us from the several disciplines involved in this enterprise to the conclusion that the crude diagnostic techniques available to us circa 1945 1965 had garnered little valid information on which to base such complex differential diagnostic decisions It now is gratifying to look back and review the remarkable progress that has occurred in the field of clinical neuropsychology in the four decades since I was a graduate student In the late 1940s such pioneers as Ward Halstead Alexander Luria George Yacorzynski Hans Lukas Teuber and Arthur Benton already were involved in clinical studies that by the late 1960s would markedly have improved the quality of clinical practice However the only psychological tests that the clinical psychologist of my immediate post Second World War generation had as aids for the diagnosis of neurologically based conditions involving cognitive deficit were such old standbys as the Wechsler Bellevue Rorschach Draw A Person Bender Gestalt and Graham Kendall Memory for Designs Test The Neuropsychology of Everyday Life: Assessment and Basic Competencies David E.
