Psychiatric Rehabilitation Raman Kapur, 2018-04-27 Recovering from severe mental illness is one of the most terrifying human experiences in health care Often conventional rehabilitation approaches focus on helping the patient with his or her symptoms and maximising the external world through supportive interventions However often little attention is paid to the internal world of the patient This subjective experience of recovery is the focus of this book It describes a particular psychoanalytic model that best captures this distressful state of mind and suggests particular processes that have to be put in place to ensure the patient gets the best opportunity to have his or her fears and hopes addressed The book also addresses real world issues such as management leadership and training as well as highlighting key research findings from relevant studies Outcome measures are suggested that could be adopted to measure the benefits of this particular approach The chapters give many clinical organisational and research descriptions from the real world of psychiatry and social care

Budson, I. Barofsky, 2012-12-06

The purpose of this book is to present an integrated approach to the treatment of the chronic psychiatric patient living in the community. This requires that topics as diverse as pharmacokinetics, psychotherapy, and community organization be appropriately coordinated. Such an approach is partly complicated by the wide range of differences among patients in terms of social skills, intellectual capacity, and psychiatric diagnosis. In addition, unclear, insular, or overlapping roles of various mental health disciplines further confound integrated treatment efforts. Given such complexity, any single clinician's point of view is subject to the distortion inherent in specialization. Too often a volume in the field of mental health focuses either on only one aspect or presents only one clinician's unique perspective of a task that is in fact multifaceted. We have tried to avoid this pitfall by having representatives from many of the concerned professions present a variety of treatment approaches and associated issues in one text. Further, the editors have attempted to illuminate the relevant clinical and/or administrative interrelationship between the subjects of each section through a succinct introductory commentary. The book is divided into five sections. The first section represents an attempt to address some of the interactive sociological, psychological, and pharmacological background issues common to all attempts at treatment of this population.
