Resource Nationalism In International Investment Law:

Resource Nationalism in International Investment Law Sangwani Patrick Ng'ambi, 2015-11-06 Foreign direct investment in the natural resource industries is fostered through the signing of concession agreements between the host State and the investor. However, such concessions are susceptible to alteration by the host State, meaning that many investors now require the insertion of stabilization clauses. These are provisions that require the host State to agree that they will not take any administrative or legislative action that would adversely affect the rights of the investor. Arguing that it is necessary to have some form of flexibility in concession agreements while still offering protection of the legitimate expectations of the investor, Resource Nationalism in International Investment Law proposes the insertion of renegotiation clauses in order to foster flexible relationships between the investor and the host State. Such clauses bind the parties to renegotiate the terms of the contract in good faith when prevailing circumstances change. However, these clauses can also prove problematic for both State and investor due to their rigidity. Using Zambia as a case study, it highlights the limitations of the efficient breach theory to emphasise the need for contractual flexibility.

Stabilization Clauses in International Investment Law Jola Gjuzi, 2018-12-05 This book analyzes the tension between the host state's commitment to provide regulatory stability for foreign investors, which is a tool for attracting FDI and generating economic growth, and its evolving non-economic commitments towards its citizens with regard to environmental protection and social welfare. The main thesis is that the stabilization clause regulatory power antinomy, as it appears in many cases, contradicts the content and rationale of sustainable development, a concept that is increasingly prevalent in national and international law and which aims at the integration and balancing of economic, environmental, and social development. To reconcile this antinomy at the decision-making and dispute settlement levels, the book employs a constructive sustainable development approach which is based on the integration and reconciliation imperatives of the concept of sustainable development as well as on the application of principles of law such as non discrimination public purpose due process proportionality and more generally good governance and rule of law It subsequently re conceptualizes stabilization clauses in terms of their design ex ante and interpretation ex post yielding stability to the benefit of foreign investors while also mitigating their negative effects on the host state s power to regulate

International Investment Law and Gender Equality Sangwani Patrick Ng'ambi, Kangwa-Musole George Chisanga, 2020-03-27 This book analyses the impact that stabilization clauses have on the development of human rights and gender laws in resource rich nations Given the fact that stabilization clauses freeze the law for as long as the contract subsists there has been debate on the negative impact stabilization clauses have on the progressive development of human rights in the host State Firstly the book examines the mechanisms investors utilise in protecting themselves from host State prerogatives It then explores the theoretical basis on which stabilization clauses are applied and upheld by arbitral tribunals and assesses how they can be drafted in a way that protects human rights particularly in relation to gender discrimination without forcing the resource rich nations to lose momentum in attracting foreign direct investment Using Zambia and the Gender Equity and Equality Act of 2015 as a case study the book explores the compatibility of the legislation with the stabilization clauses contained in the country s Development Agreements The book will be of interest to practitioners scholars and students of international investment law human rights law and contract law

International Investment Law Surya P Subedi, 2012-08-01 This book offers an up to date scholarly overview of the law of foreign investment incorporating a thorough and succinct analysis of the principles and standards of treatment available to foreign investors in international law It is authoritative and multi layered offering an analysis of the key issues and an insightful assessment of recent trends in the case law from both developed and developing country perspectives A major feature of the book is that it deals with the tension between the law of foreign investment and other competing principles of international law In doing so it proposes ways of achieving a balance between these principles and the need to protect the legitimate rights and expectations of foreign investors on the one hand and the need not to unduly restrict the right of host governments to implement their public policy including the protection of the environment and human rights and the promotion of social and economic justice within the host country on the other Since the first edition was published a number of landmark decisions have been produced by various international investment tribunals calling for an update in what is a fast growing and rapidly changing investment environment In addition scholars and other actors both non governmental and inter governmental have responded to the agenda set by the first edition of this book thus the second edition also reflects on the work of some of these major actors in the field This is perhaps the first book of its type authored by an international lawyer who has taught researched and advised in both the developed and developing world over the past 25 years The wealth of experience he brings to the task enables him to develop unique insights into the interplay between the law economics and politics of foreign investment making this book essential reading for students scholars
