Modeling Cities and Regions as Complex Systems Roger White, Guy Engelen, Inge Uljee, 2015-09-11 The theory and practice of modeling cities and regions as complex self organizing systems presenting widely used cellular automata based models theoretical discussions and applications Cities and regions grow or occasionally decline and continuously transform themselves as they do so This book describes the theory and practice of modeling the spatial dynamics of urban growth and transformation As cities are complex adaptive self organizing systems the most appropriate modeling framework is one based on the theory of self organizing systems an approach already used in such fields as physics and ecology The book presents a series of models most of them developed using cellular automata CA which are inherently spatial and computationally efficient It also provides discussions of the theoretical methodological and philosophical issues that arise from the models A case study illustrates the use of these models in urban and regional planning Finally the book presents a new dynamic theory of urban spatial structure that emerges from the models and their applications The models are primarily land use models but the more advanced ones also show the dynamics of population and economic activities and are integrated with models in other domains such as economics demography and transportation The result is a rich and realistic representation of the spatial dynamics of a variety of urban phenomena The book is unique in its coverage of both the general issues associated with complex self organizing systems and the specifics of designing and implementing models of such systems

Modernism and Close Reading David James, 2020-04-30 The kinship between modernism and close reading has long been taken for granted But for that reason it has also gone unexamined As the archives timeframes and cultural contexts of global modernist studies proliferate the field's rapport with close reading no longer appears self evident or guaranteed even though for countless students studying literary modernism still invariably means studying close reading This authoritative collection of essays illuminates close reading's conceptual institutional and pedagogical genealogies as a means of examining its enduring potential David James brings together a cast of world renowned scholars to offer an account of some of the things we might otherwise know and need to know about the history of modernist theories of reading before then providing a sense of how the futures for critical reading look different in light of the multiple ways in which modernism has been close read

Modernism and Close Reading responds to a contemporary climate of unprecedented reconstitution for the field it takes stock of close reading's methodological possibilities in the wake of modernist studies geographical literary historical and interdisciplinary expansions and it shows how the political ethical and aesthetic consequences of attending to matters of form complicate ideological preconceptions about the practice of formalism itself By reassessing the intellectual commitments and institutional conditions that have shaped modernism in criticism as well as in the classroom we are able to ask new questions about close reading that resonate across literary and cultural studies Invigorating that critical venture this volume enriches our vocabulary for addressing close reading's perpetual development and diversification
