Quantitative Aspects Of Ruminant Digestion And Metabolism:

Quantitative Aspects of Ruminant Digestion and Metabolism J. M. Forbes, 1993 Digestion Metabolism The whole animal Measuring Methane Production from Ruminants Harinder P.S. Makkar, Philip E. Vercoe, 2007-09-20 The world's livestock sector is amidst a major transformation fuelled by high demand for meat and milk which is likely to double over the next two decades in developing countries The major driving force behind this demand for livestock products is a combination of population growth urbanization and income growth especially in developing countries The challenge is to enhance animal productivity without adversely affecting the environment A key to this is reducing methane emissions from ruminants The major limitation to ruminant production in many tropical regions of Africa Asia and Latin America where a large proportion of the global ruminant population is located is poor nutrition The productivity of animals is restricted by the low nitrogen and high fibre content of the native grasses and crop residues which form the basis of the diets in these regions Animals on these types of diets emit more methane than animals fed better quality temperate forages These methane emissions represent a loss of digestible energy to the animal up to 15% as well as a threat to the environment Reducing methane production by ruminants could improve their productivity provided the efficiency of ruminal metabolism is not compromised and reduce their contribution to greenhouse gas emissions The challenge is to devise nutritional strategies and identify dietary components particularly from locally available plant resources that reduce methane emissions Synchronization of Energy and Protein Supply in the Rumen of Dairy Cows Teja Kaswari, 2004 Rumen Microbial Metabolism and Ruminant Digestion J. P. Jouany, 1991 This book brings together the data of latest international research and was conceived as the result of a summer school held at the INRA Centre of Clermont Ferrand Theix from 24 September to 4 October 1990 The subject is the rumen as a fermentor and the means by which rumen functioning can be optimized for the maximum benefit of the ruminant Modeling Ruminant Digestion and Metabolism R.L.  Bioeconomic analysis Quantitative Aspects of Ruminant Digestion and Metabolism John Michael Forbes, James France, 1993-01-01 Ruminant animals have evolved a set of stomachs harboring microorganisms which are capable of digesting fibrous materials such as cellulose in plants They account for almost all of the milk and more than half of the meat consumed worldwide Therefore a great deal of research has been conducted on the digestive system of ruminants and on the metabolism of products of digestion As qualitative knowledge increased it became possible to develop quantitative approaches initially using complex statistical analyses but more recently by constructing mechanistic mathematical models This book brings together quantitative approaches used in the study of mechanisms of ruminant digestion and metabolism Written by leading authorities from the UK United States Canada and Australia it is aimed at research workers and advanced students in animal sciences Ruminant physiology K. Sejrsen, T. Hvelplund, M.O. Nielsen, 2023-08-28 This book contains key contributions to the Xth International Symposium on Ruminant Physiology Proceedings from past ISRP symposia have had a major influence on research and teaching in animal science over the years Without a doubt the peer reviewed chapters in this book written by some of the best scientists in the field will live up to this fine tradition The chapters cover a wide range of topics spanning from digestion and absorption to metabolism reproduction and lactation Advancement of knowledge within important issues related to rumen fermentation absorption mechanisms and splanchnic metabolism is treated in nine chapters A number of chapters address the relationship between nutrition and gene expression illustrating important progress in scientific knowledge that can be obtained by applying the molecular biology methods to the field Several chapters address the effects of nutrition on immunology and cover topics related to the health and welfare of production animals In keeping with the increased attention on the relationship between food and human health the book contains two important chapters on this topic Nutrient Digestion and Utilization in Farm Animals E. Kebreab, 2006 This book contains 34 chapters on nutrition physiology and presents scientific research in modelling nutrient digestion and utilization in domestic animals including cattle sheep pigs poultry and fishes It is divided into 6 parts that cover fermentation absorption and passage growth and development mineral metabolism methodology and model development environmental impacts and animal production and feed evaluation models Deterministic stochastic empirical and mechanistic modelling approaches are also described This book will be of significant interest to researchers and students of animal science especially those concerned with nutrition modelling

Nutrient Requirements of Domesticated Ruminants , Primary Industries Standing Committee,2007-08-16 Nutrient Requirements of Domesticated Ruminants draws on the most up to date research on the energy protein mineral vitamin and water requirements of beef and dairy cattle sheep and goats It defines the responses of animals in weight change milk production and wool growth to quantitative and qualitative changes in their feed supply It has particular application to grazing animals Factors affecting the intake of feed are taken into account and recommendations are given according to the production systems being used for instance the feed intake of a grazing animal is affected by a larger number of variables than a housed animal Examples of the estimation of the energy and nutrients required for the different production systems are given as well as the production expected from predicted feed intakes The interactions between the grazing animal the pasture and any supplementary feeds are complex involving herbage availability diet selection and substitution To facilitate the application of these recommendations to particular grazing situations readers are directed to decision support tools and spreadsheet programs Nutrient Requirements of Domesticated Ruminants is based on the benchmark publication Feeding Standards for Australian Livestock Ruminants published in 1990 by CSIRO PUBLISHING on behalf of the Standing Committee on Agriculture It provides comprehensive and useful information for graziers livestock advisors veterinarians feed manufacturers and animal nutrition researchers The recommendations described are equally applicable to animals in feedlots or drought yards
