Book Development Neolithic House Societies Orkney:

Art and Architecture in Neolithic Orkney Antonia Thomas, 2016-09-26 This book offers a groundbreaking analysis of Neolithic art and architecture in Orkney focussing upon the incredible collection of hundreds of decorated stones being revealed by the current excavations at the Ness of Brodgar The Circular Archetype in Microcosm: The Carved Stone Balls of Late Neolithic Scotland Chris L. Stewart-Moffitt, 2022-07-14 This study is the culmination of seven years research into the Carved Stone Balls of Late Neolithic Scotland It is the first study of these enigmatic artefacts since that undertaken by Dorothy Marshall in 1977 and includes all currently known examples in both museums and private hands described and analysed in considerable detail Rethinking Roundhouses D. W. Harding, 2023 Of all structural or material remains from later British prehistory roundhouses are probably the most archetypical with a great range of regional variants in terms of ground plans and structural materials used This study rethinks the archaeology of roundhouses based on the latest development led research excavation Far from Equilibrium: An archaeology of energy, life and humanity Michael J. Boyd, Roger C. P. Doonan, 2021-03-03 Archaeology is in crisis Spatial turns material turns and the ontological turn have directed the discipline away from its hard won battle to find humanity in the past Meanwhile popularised science camouflaged as archaeology produces shock headlines built on ancient DNA that reduce humanity s most intriguing historical problems to two dimensional caricatures Today archaeology finds itself less able than ever to proclaim its relevance to the modern world This volume foregrounds the relevance of the scholarship of John Barrett to this crisis Twenty four writers representing three generations of archaeologists scrutinise the current turmoil in the discipline and highlight the resolutions that may be found through Barrett s analytical framework Topics include archaeology and the senses the continuing problem of the archaeological record practice discourse and agency reorienting archaeological field practice the question of different expressions of human diversity and material ecologies Understanding archaeology as both a universal and highly specific discipline case studies range from the Aegean to Orkney and encompass Anatolia Korea Romania United Kingdom and the very nature of the Universe itself This critical examination of John Barrett s contribution to archaeology is simultaneously a response to his urgent call to arms to reorient archaeology in the service of humanity Revisiting Grooved Ware Mike Copper, Alasdair Whittle, Alison Sheridan, 2024-01-18 Following its appearance arguably in Orkney in the 32nd century cal BC Grooved Ware soon became widespread across Britain and Ireland seemingly replacing earlier pottery styles and being deposited in contexts as varied as simple pits passage tombs ceremonial timber circles and henge monuments As a result Grooved Ware lies at the heart of many ongoing debates concerning social and economic developments at the end of the 4th and during the first half of the 3rd millennia cal BC Stemming from the 2022 Neolithic Studies Group autumn conference and following on from Cleal and MacSween s 1999 NSG volume on Grooved Ware this book presents a series of papers from researchers specializing in Grooved Ware pottery and the British and Irish Neolithic offering both regional and thematic perspectives on this important ceramic tradition Chapters cover the development of Grooved Ware in Orkney as well as the timing and nature of its appearance development and subsequent demise in different regions of Britain and Ireland In addition thematic papers consider what Grooved Ware can contribute to understandings of inter regional interactions during the earlier 3rd millennium cal BC the possible meaning of Grooved Ware s decorative motifs and the thorny issue of the validity and significance of the various Grooved Ware sub styles The book will be of great value not only to archaeologists and students with a specific interest in Grooved Ware pottery but also to those with a more general interest in the development of the Neolithic of Britain and Ireland

Building the Great Stone Circles of the North Colin Richards,2013-11-30 Of all prehistoric monuments few are more emotive than the great stone circles that were built throughout Britain and Ireland From the tall elegant pointed monoliths of the Stones of Stenness to the grandeur of Stonehenge and the sarsen blocks at Avebury circles of stone exert a magnetic fascination to those who venture into their sphere In Britain today more people visit these structures than any other form of prehistoric monument and visitors stand in awe at their scale and question how and why they were erected Building the Great Stone Circles of the North looks at the enigmatic stone structures of Scotland and investigates the background of their construction and their cultural significance

The Neolithic of Britain and Ireland Vicki Cummings,2025-04-24 The Neolithic of Britain and Ireland provides a comprehensive overview of this exciting period covering the last few hundred years of the Mesolithic and the arrival and spread of the Neolithic up to the start of the early Beaker period roughly 2000 years of prehistory Drawing on the latest excavations and the results of new scientific techniques this book considers what life was like for people in the Neolithic and how they were treated when they died It explores in detail the monuments constructed from stone and wood the most famous of which is Stonehenge but also includes many other sites such as chambered tombs and causewayed enclosures It considers some of the key ways we interpret evidence from the Neolithic to offer insights into social organisation and belief systems at this time The new edition contains the results of the latest ancient DNA evidence which has seen this period of prehistory undergoing considerable revision in the last few years Exciting new finds and excavations are also included This is an accessible introduction for students new to the study of the Neolithic and also acts as a reference for students and scholars already researching this area

Petrification Processes in Matter and Society Sophie Hüglin,Alexander Gramsch,Liisa Seppänen,2021-08-13 Petrification is a process but it also can be understood as a concept This volume takes the first steps to manifest materialize or petrify the concept of petrification and turn it into a tool for analyzing material and social processes The wide array of approaches to petrification as a process assembled here is more of a collection of possibilities than an attempt to establish a firm law generating theory Divided into three parts this volume s twenty plus authors explore petrification both as a theoretical concept and as a contextualized material and social process across geological prehistoric and historic periods Topics connecting the various papers are properties of materials preferences and choices of actors the temporality of matter being and becoming the relationality between actors matter things and space landscape urban space built space and perceptions of the following generations dealing with the petrified matter practices and social relations Contributors to this volume study specifically whether particular processes of petrification are confined to the material world or can be seen as mirroring following triggering or contradicting changes in social life and general world views Each of the authors explores for a period or a specific feature practices and changes that led to increased conformity and regularity Some authors additionally focus on the methods and scrutinize them and their applications for their potential to create objects of investigation things people periods in order to raise awareness for these or to shape or invent categories This volume is of interest to archaeologists geologists architectural historians conservationists and historians

Temporary Palaces Richard Bradley, 2021-05-31 The Great Houses of the prehistoric and early medieval periods were enormous structures whose forms were modelled on those of domestic dwellings Most were built of wood rather than stone they were used over comparatively short periods they were frequently replaced in the same positions and some were associated with exceptional groups of artefacts Their construction made considerable demands on human labour and approached the limits of what was possible at the time They seem to have played specialised roles in ancient society but they have been difficult to interpret Were they public buildings or the dwellings of important people Were they temples or military bases and why were they erected during times of crisis or change How were their sites selected and how were they related to the remains of a more ancient past Although their currency extended from the time of the first farmers to the Viking Age the similarities between the Great Houses are as striking as the differences This study focuses on the monumental buildings of northern and northwestern Europe but draws on structures over a wide area extending from Anatolia as far as Brittany and Norway It employs ethnography as a source of ideas and discusses the concept of the House Society and its usefulness in archaeology The main examples are taken from the Neolithic and Iron Age periods but this account also draws on the archaeology of the first millennium AD The book emphasises the importance of comparing archaeological sequences with one another rather than identifying ideal social types In doing so it features a range of famous and less famous sites from Stonehenge to the Hill of Tara and from Old Uppsala to Yeavering

Maritime Archaeology on Dry Land Richard Bradley, 2022-05-19 This book is about two islands off the coast of Continental Europe the seas that surrounded them and the ways in which they were used over a period of three thousand years Instead of the usual emphasis on finds in the intertidal zone it focuses on parts of Britain and Ireland where traces of the prehistoric shoreline survive above sea level It explores a series of Neolithic and Early Bronze Age sites which were investigated in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries and have been largely forgotten These places were very different from the Iron Age ports and harbors studied in recent years How can we identify these special sites and what are the best ways of interpreting them The book considers the evidence for travel by sea between the settlement of the earliest farmers and the long distance movement of metalwork It emphasizes the distinctive archaeology of a series of coastal locations Little of the information is familiar and some of the most useful evidence was recorded many years ago It is supplemented by new studies of these places and the artifacts found there as well as reconstructions of the prehistoric coastline The book emphasizes the important role of enclosed estuaries which were both sheltered harbors and special places where artifacts were introduced by sea Other items were made there and exchanged with local communities It considers the role played by these places in the wider pattern of settlement and their relationship to major monuments The book describes how the character of coastal sites changed in parallel with developments in maritime technology and trade The main emphasis is on Neolithic and Early Bronze Ages uses of the seashore but the archaeology of the Middle and Later Bronze Age provides a source of comparison
