Rosenbaum, 2020-11-16 During the nineteenth century gridding graphing and surveying proliferated

as never before as nations and empires expanded into hitherto unknown territories Though nominally geared toward justifying territorial claims and collecting scientific data expeditions also produced vast troves of visual and artistic material This book considers the explosion of expeditionary mapping and its links to visual culture across the Americas arguing that acts of measurement are also aesthetic acts Such visual interventions intersect with new technologies with sociopolitical power and conflict and with shifting public tastes and consumption practices Several key questions shape this examination What kinds of nineteenth century visual practices and technologies of seeing do these materials engage How does scientific knowledge get translated into the visual and disseminated to the public What are the commonalities and distinctions in mapping strategies between North and South America How does the constitution of expeditionary lines reorder space and the natural landscape itself The volume represents the first transnational and hemispheric analysis of nineteenth century cartographic aesthetics and features the multi disciplinary perspective of historians geographers and art historians

Patricia Phelps de Cisneros, 2015 In the 19th century European and North American travelers illustrated narratives of their explorations in the New World that were published in Europe Europeans imagined the tropics as a site for cultural imperialism and fantasies of self realization Traveler artists often authenticated this perception by presenting the landscape as an enchanted land Later in the century native artists began to pick up the European landscape tradition and reflect on their own culture through a different lens Traveler Artists contributes new scholarship to this burgeoning field and offers original research on 52 artworks by such key figures as Frans Post Frederick Edwin Church Jos Mar a Velasco and Auguste Morisot many of which are reproduced here for the first time Decolonial Ecologies Joanna Page, 2023-06-14 In
