Answers

1. Cartesian Product - The set of all possible ordered pairs (a, b) composed of elements taken from the two sets, A and B.
2. Composition - A function operation symbolized $(f \circ g)(x)$ that is equivalent to $f(g(x))$.
3. Defined - A function is defined at a given value of the independent variable if it assigns that input and output; defined means "takes on a value".
4. Dependent Variable - The output variable of a function; the variable whose value depends on the input, or independent variable.
5. Domain - The set of all inputs for which a function or relation is defined.
6. Even Function - A function f is even if $f(x) = f(-x)$.
7. Function - A relation which assigns exactly one element in its range for each element in its domain.

8. Horizontal Line Test - The test by which it is shown whether a function is a one-to-one function or not, and therefore whether its inverse is a function.

9. Independent Variable - The variable of a function which does not depend on the other variable — it is the input.
10. Inverse - A relation which assigns a correspondence from the elements of the range to those of the domain. The inverse of a function or relation can be found by interchanging the variables in the function or relation.
11. Odd Function - A function f is odd if $f(x) = -f(-x)$.
12. One-to-One Function - A function is one-to-one if each element in its range is paired with exactly one element from its domain.
13. Periodic Function - A function is periodic if and only if $f(x) = f(x + c)$, for all values x , where c is a constant. A periodic function repeats itself at regular intervals.
14. Piecewise Function - A function is piecewise if and only if it uses different rules for different parts of its domain.
15. Range - The set of all outputs of a function or relation.
16. Relation - A rule that associates the elements of one set with those of another set. A relation can also be thought of as all of the ordered pairs which satisfy the rule.
17. Undefined - A function is undefined at a given value of its independent variable if for that value, there is no output; this occurs when a particular input creates a situation in which there is division by zero, or an even root of a negative number, for example.
