This textbook serves as an introduction to the subject of embedded systems design using microcontrollers as core components. It develops concepts from the ground up covering the development of embedded systems technology, architectural and organizational aspects of controllers and systems, processor models and peripheral devices. Since microprocessor-based embedded systems tightly blend hardware and software components in a single application, the book also introduces the subjects of data representation, formats, data operations, and programming styles. The practical component of the book is tailored around the architecture of a widely used Texas Instruments microcontroller, the MSP430, and a companion web site offers for download an experimenter's kit and lab manual along with Powerpoint slides and solutions for instructors. Inside Immigration Detention Mary Bosworth, 2014-09-18 On any given day nearly 3000 foreign national citizens are detained under immigration powers in UK detention centres alone. Around the world immigrants are routinely detained in similar conditions. The institutions charged with immigrant detention are volatile and contested sites. They are also places about which we know very little. What is their goal? How do they operate? How are they justified? Inside Immigration Detention lifts the lid on the hidden world of migrant detention, presenting the first national study of life in British immigration removal centres. Offering more than just a description of life behind bars of those men and women awaiting deportation, it uses staff and detainee testimonies to revisit key assumptions about state power and the legacies of colonialism under conditions of globalization. Based on fieldwork conducted in six immigration removal centres (IRCs) between 2009 and 2012, it draws together a large amount of empirical data including detainee surveys and interviews, staff interviews, observation, and detailed field notes. From this, the book explores how immigration removal centres identify their inhabitants as strangers, constructing them as unfamiliar, ambiguous, and uncertain. In this endeavour, the establishments are greatly assisted by their resemblance to prisons and by familiar racialized narratives about foreigners and nationality. However, as staff and detainee testimonies reveal in their interactions and day-to-day life, women and men find many points of commonality. Such recognition of one another reveals the goal and effect of detention to be incomplete. Denial requires effort. In order to minimize the effort, it must expend the state governs at distance via the contract. It also splits itself in two, deploying some immigration staff onsite while keeping the actual decision makers, the caseworkers, elsewhere, sequestered from the potentially destabilizing effects of facing up to those whom they wish to remove. Such distancing, while bureaucratically effective, contributes to the uncertainty of daily life in detention and is often the source of considerable criticism and unease. Denial and familiarity are embodied and localized activities whose pains and contradictions inhere in
