Migration Identity Central Asia Experience:

Migration and Identity in Central Asia Rano Turaeva, 2015-11-19 This book is an ethnographic and sociolinguistic study of Uzbek migrants in the capital city of Uzbekistan. The ethnographic details of the book represent post-Soviet urban realities on the ground where various forms of belonging, clash, and kinship ties are reinforced within social safety networks. Theoretically, it challenges the existing theories of identity and identification which often considered the relations between We and Them, taking the We for granted. The book offers in-depth insights into the communication strategies of migrants, the formation of collective consciousness, and the relations within the We domain. Constructed around contradictions regarding Uzbek identity and how various groups relate to one another as different ethnic groups, the theoretical argument of the book is built through such methods and analytical tools as strategic rhetoric and discourse analysis, communication and identity theories, and the analysis of power and dependence. The book will be of interest to students and scholars of Central Asian Studies, Migration Studies, and Central Asian Culture and Society.

Labour, Mobility and Informal Practices in Russia, Central Asia and Eastern Europe Rano Turaeva, Rustamjon Urinboyev, 2021-05-26 This book explores the daily survival strategies of people within the context of failed states, flourishing informal economies, legal uncertainty, increased mobility, and globalization where many people who are forced by the circumstances to be innovative and transnational have found their niches outside formal processes and structures. The book provides a thorough theoretical introduction to the link between labour mobility and informality and comprises convincing case studies from a wide range of post-socialist countries. Overall, it highlights the importance of trust, transnational networks, and digital technologies in settings where the rules governing economic and social activities of mobile workers are often unclear and flexible.

Movement, Power and Place in Central Asia and Beyond Madeleine Reeves, 2013-09-13 Central Asia is a region singularly marked by attempts to transform social life by transforming place. Drawing together established scholars and a new generation of historians, geographers, and anthropologists, this volume brings empirical specificity and theoretical depth to debates about the politics of place making in this diverse region, making an important contribution to Central Asian studies and a distinctive regional comparison to the spatial turn in social analysis. Case studies draw on archival research and oral history to explore the workings and unintended consequences of policies aimed at sedentarizing, collectivizing, and resettling populations as a means to fix and territorialize space. The book also examines ethnographic studies attuned to the role of movement in sustaining social life from Soviet-era trade networks that linked rural Central Asia and the Russian metropolis to pilgrimage routes through which Kazakhness is articulated to the contemporary moralization of migration abroad in search of work. Rather than analysing flows as abstract processes, the book enquires about effortful activity, material infrastructures, political relations, and social habits through which people, ideas, knowledge, skills, and material objects move or are prevented from moving. As such, it offers new insights into the complex intersections of movement, power, and place in this important region over the last two centuries. This book
